She has only just turned 18, but Greta Thunberg is already a household name. She has addressed a United Nations conference, met the Pope, and appeared on the front cover of Time magazine, but she's not a celebrity. She's an activist and she is fighting against climate change. She says the world is getting hotter and hotter, and this is the most important issue right now, even more important than the coronavirus.

Greta grew up in Sweden. Her father is an actor and her mother is an opera singer. Greta believes that airplanes are one of the main causes of climate change. As a child, Greta persuaded her parents to stop flying. She also got them to stop eating meat. Greta says that cows are also a cause of climate change because they produce methane gas.

After persuading her parents to change their lifestyle, Greta decided to target politicians next. In 2018, instead of going to school, she stood outside the Swedish parliament for three weeks. She wanted the government to reduce carbon dioxide emissions, which she said are a cause of climate change.

She later changed this protest into a weekly event, happening every Friday. Many school children around the world joined these protests. On Fridays, instead of doing their class work, they refuse to go to school.
